EPA Finishes Review of Wyckoff/Eagle Harbor Cleanup

Report Available

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has completed its fourth Five-Year Review of the Wyckoff/Eagle Harbor Superfund site on Bainbridge Island. We are required to review Superfund cleanups at least every five years at sites where contaminants remain in place. EPA uses the review to ensure that cleanup actions are protecting people's health and the environment.

Wyckoff/Eagle Harbor was listed as a Superfund site in 1987. Over the past 30 years, EPA has made significant progress in cleaning up this site to make it a healthier place for people, fish, and shellfish. However, creosote and related chemicals still present some risk.

Earlier this year, we asked for community input that might assist us with the Five-Year Review. We didn't receive any public comments. However, we incorporated comments from the Washington State Department of Ecology and the Suquamish Tribe. The review found that the cleanup actions proposed in the 2016 Proposed Plan are necessary to ensure people's health and the environment are protected for the long-term.
